

Mozambique, Comoros, Tanzania | Tropical Cyclone KENNETH

- Tropical Cyclone KENNETH made landfall in Mozambique between Macomia and Quissanga Districts on 25 April.
- As of 26 April, three fatalities have been reported on Grande Comore Island, at least 20 injured and 1 000 displaced. Initial informations point to extensive damage across Comoros, with several villages flooded, power outages and road blocks in Grande Comore and Anjouan. In northern Mozambique, several houses have been damaged and at least 30 000 people have been evacuated, while evacuations have taken place in southern Tanzania.
- This is the first time that two strong tropical cyclones have hit Mozambique in the same season, with Tropical Cyclone IDAI leaving more than 600 people dead in March.
